Cyndy Warkentin maintains a private studio in her home in Landmark, Manitoba where she teaches singing and music theory to students of all ages. She is a strong supporter of the performing arts and has been active in art's festivals for many years, beginning as a competitor herself and then as a teacher preparing her own students to perform. She has held a variety of positions on her local festival executive, she is a qualified vocal adjudicator, and is currently serving as past-president on the board of the Associated Manitoba Art's Festivals.

A highlight of each summer since 2003 is being part of the teaching faculty during the vocal/choral week at the International Music Camp.

She has many students that have won awards in festivals and competitions in a variety of musical styles including classical, pop, jazz, and musical theatre, as well as students who have gone on to professional careers in music. In addition to her music-teaching schedule and her involvement with art's festivals, she also serves as a pastor in her church.
